SET SCHOOL TAX RATE HERE SAME AS IT WAS LAST YEAR

Board Decides Upon 16 Mills
And A Per Capita
Tax of $4

ELECT NEW TEACHER

Miss Elizabeth Forsyth Named
As Teacher In Elementary Grades

The school tax rate was fixed at 16 mills and the per capita tax at $4 last night at a special meeting of the Bristol school board. The budget submitted at a previous meeting and which has been on view in the office of Superintendent Warren P. Snyder, was adopted. The tax rate and the per capita tax are the same as last year.

Miss Elizabeth C. Forsyth, a resident of Chestnut Hill and a graduate of Phila. Normal School, and who will receive a diploma from Temple University, this school year, was elected a teacher in the elementary grades.

The Board voted to have the grounds at the Beaver street building cleaned and the work was left to be done under the direction of the property committee.

Arthur P. Brady again called to the attention of the Board the proposed celebration of Air-Mail Week, and the suggestion of the Air-Mail Week celebration committee that the school children be dismissed on Thursday afternoon, to see the air-mail here. No action was taken by the Board.

The following dates were announced in connection with the graduation exercises of the Bristol high school:

June 1—Junior-Senior banquet.
June 2—Class night.

Grant Myers Celebrates Twenty Years in Prison

DOYLESTOWN, May 17—Grant Myers, of this place, yesterday celebrated 20 years in prison, but not as a convict—just as Head Keeper.

During that time Keeper Myers, in charge of the affairs at the Bucks County Prison, has been in contact with approximately 15,000 prisoners so to make it fitting and proper yesterday, it was one of the prisoners who baked him a big festive cake as part of a surprise celebration that greeted him when he arrived at the prison for duty early in the morning.

There were twenty candles on the cake and the Head Keeper also received a lot of plants and flowers, the gifts of his associates in a surprise planned by Sheriff William L. Stackhouse and his wife who is the matron of the prison.

Head Keeper Myers started at the prison twenty years ago under the late Sheriff Charles H. Gantz. His experiences have been numerous and would fill a book of thrill stories but his closest escape from death came on October 23, 1924, when he was beaten up by a desperate criminal, James McGee, who at present is serving a term in Holmesburg Prison for bank robbery.

Cheer Bristol Entry In Atlantic City Horse Show

Seaver, Newtown; Thomas Doran, Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ewing, Morrisville; William Weinmann, Morrisville; Agnes Weinmann, Morrisville; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sidel, Langhorne; Carl Schilling, Bristol; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pearson, Bristol, and Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. A very unfortunate incident occurred upon the return of Miss Agnes Weinmann, who was expected to be a colorful exhibitor in the Bristol Horse Show. The car in which she was riding collided with another, killing the drivers of both cars. Miss Weinmann is in Atlantic City Hospital seriously injured.

FIREMEN ON C. O. D. BASIS

MISSION, B. C.—(INS)—After two dwellings in the Matsqui district were destroyed by fire with an estimated loss of $6,000, inquiries were instituted as to why the fire brigade from Mission failed to arrive in answer to a call. Fire Chief Joe Holliday explained it was contrary to regulations to respond to an alarm outside the Mission district unless a financial guarantee of expenses is posted. Furthermore, he stated, the Matsqui district owed the Mission fire department for two previous calls.

LANGHORNE WINS PROTEST; NEW HOPE RETAINED

Action Taken at Special Meeting Held in Fallsington
Last Night

DETAILS ARE GIVEN

FALLSINGTON, May 17—Two protests were filed with the secretary of the Lower Bucks County scholastic baseball league for boys. Coach George Reimer, of Bensalem High,
and they were brought up for testing
by the league at a special meeting held in the high school here for that purpose. And when it was all over, one protest was upheld while the other was denied. However, it was out of sentiment that the latter protest was rejected.

The two protests, one of which was more in the form of a complaint, were filed by Langhorne High School against Morrisville, while Buckingham High tossed in the other against New Hope. The former was the one which the league upheld, while the latter was turned down. Both created much discussion pro and con regarding the subject matter upon which the basis for the protests were formed, especially was this so in the first mentioned one.

Those involved directly in the Langhorne-Morrisville dispute were the coaches from both schools, and the umpires of the game, John Lippincott and Ike Watson.

The situation arose in the seventh inning of the game played at Langhorne on Tuesday, May 10th. The Redskins had the bases full with only one out and Chuck Klein at bat. Klein, batting left handed against the right hand shots of John Ross, Morrisville pitcher, slapped a hard grounder between short and third which got past
the Bulldog third sacker, Bill Wilson, who was playing in close for a bunt.

Jim Yeager, Morrisville shortstop, raced in to field the ball, while Lloyd Reed, who was on second, dashed for third. In so doing, Morrisville claimed Reed ran into Yeager and thus interfered with Jim's fielding the ball, which automatically made the base runner out and declared the ball dead.

The runner on third, they claimed,
should be sent back to the bag but that Klein would be awarded first base and forcing Bispham, who was on first to second, thus making the bases still loaded but with two out.

That was the judgment and decision handed down by the base umpire,
John Lippincott, who ruled the play.
Ike Watson, umpiring behind the plate, did not overrule Lippincott on the decision he made nor did the latter change his mind of his opinion.

Langhorne on the other hand, contended that Reed did not interfere with Yeager in fielding the ball, but that Yeager had bumped into Reed in coming up to field the ball.

Each of the four who gave their version of the play as they saw it differed with the other three in their judgment of the play. Beck, who was first to tell his story, claimed the ball passed in front of both Reed and Yeager, after it passed Wilson and went out into left field. He stated that Yeager was running parallel with Reed and slightly behind him toward third and that "Jim" had apparently lost his balance and pushed Reed in so doing.

Coach John Hoffman said that Reed ran into Yeager as the latter was fielding the ball on the base line and that Reed knocked the ball from Yeager's outstretched arms, thus in so doing interfering with the fielder who has the "right of way."

Lippincott stated that the ball went behind both the runner and fielder
but that Reed bumped into Yeager, thus preventing the latter from any chance of handling the ball. He said the ball went into center field more near second base.

Ike Watson declared that from his position, all three would probably have met on the base line if Reed hadn't stopped to allow the ball to go on past him. "When Reed stopped," said Yeager, "Watson bumped into him as he was running toward the ball just behind Reed." He said the ball passed in front of both the runner and fielders and went out into left field after it took a big hop over Yeager's head.

Both Hopf, who was on third, and Reed, who was the center of the controversy, scored from second. However, the umpire on the bases stood pat on his decision after a half hour of arguing, declaring Reed out for inference, sending Hopf back to third, awarding Klein first base, which forced Bispham at second. It was generally agreed upon that the runner on third would have scored even if a perfect play by Yeager had resulted from fielding the ball. And this, plus the fact that the general consensus of opinion as to the position of both Reed and Yeager in relationship with the ball were in Langhorne's favor, resulted in the league's upholding of the Redskins' protest.

TOO-SMART DIPLOMACY

When the Japanese ambassador in Moscow protested lately to Litvinov against the presence of Russian pilots and planes in China, the Soviet foreign minister replied that the Japanese did not concede a war was taking place in China and that therefore the protest was irrelevant.

John Guther, reporting the incident in his series on the Far East, calls it a "neat" rejoinder and no doubt it was, in the way that Japan's denial that a war exists in China is a "smart" procedure. Four years ago, Secretary Hull was moved to protest encroachments on the right of American firms in Manchukuo the protest going naturally enough to Tokyo since the new puppet state was its creature, with a ruler selected by Tokyo and a government and economy managed by agents of Japan.

Tokyo's reply was "neat" in the same shyster way: That since Manchukuo was an independent state for which Japan had no responsibility, the Hull protest should properly be directed to Manchukuo, which Hull could not do, since the puppet state lacked American recognition.

The palpably false and specious and recognized currency in much of the present diplomacy, and sophistry has almost ceased to cause remark. Yet no relations between peoples which look to world unity can thrive on any basis but candor and good faith. And if it is objected that diplomacy never has been characterized by candor, it can be countered, too, that we have never been without wars on that account.

Particularly in the world and time in which we live, decisiveness in the intercourse of nations is fraught with peril. There have been few times when there was so great a difference between being clever and being wise.

WPA, HERE WE COME!

Graduating class slogans always have been expected to view the future hopefully. Young people who have the energy to meet the stiff requirements of school training should have the confidence to face the future with enthusiasm. It is something of a shock therefore to read that a Louisiana high school senior class chose for its class motto: "WPA, Here We Come!"

The older generation, who impose responsibility for conditions that give youth of today this gloomy outlook, should feel the sting of such a rebuke. The driving force that made America a mighty nation was the courage, initiative and resourcefulness of its people. At the beginning there were long years when the average standard of living was below that of our worst depression periods yet the spirit of the pioneers was hopeful and even enthusiastic. They scorned hardship and most of all dependence. To them it would have been unthinkable that they should relax effort and trust to public support.

The outlook is gloomy when trained young people looking out upon life say, "What's the use?" Worst of all is the condition which prompts the least ambitions to say, "There is no use to exert ourselves; we shall not succeed and anyway we shall be taken care of some how!"

It is time for a foltight united effort to clear the skies of such clouds and to bring to American youth a brighter outlook.

It is not known how the Japanese emperor would hold up, as a poet, under fire.

"CONTRABAND" by Dennis Wheatley

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Sallust, young English private investigator, is greatly interested in the affairs of the beautiful Hungarian girl, Sabine Szente, for two reasons: first, because her beauty and charm are irresistible; second, because she is associated with Lord Gavin Fortescue, a sinister, shadowy figure in international affairs. Fortescue is a strange-looking little man, curiously misshapen. Sallust knows him by reputation and has begun to suspect that he and Sabine are concerned in smuggling activities when Gregory is investigating for Sir Fellmore Gwaine-Cust, a British industrial giant. Gregory and Sabine have become friends, although she will tell him nothing of herself or her relations with Fortescue. In saving Inspector Wells, of Scotland Yard, from a brawl in a cafe near Deauville, France, where Sabine had lured the victim, Gregory gains possession of a mysterious coded telegram dropped during the fight. Sabine refuses to enlighten Gregory on the telegram, warning him it is dangerous to know too much. She agrees to spend the following day with the infatuated Gregory. Dining at a roadside inn, Sabine is filled with apprehension for Gregory's safety when she sees "The Limper," one of Lord Gavin's henchmen, watching them. Later, when Gregory goes to get his car, he is attacked by a man who throws pepper in his eyes. Sabine disappears. Returning to England, Gregory calls on Inspector Marrowfat of Scotland Yard to enlist his aid in capturing the criminals. The inspector refuses to work with Gregory but assigns Wells to trail the latter, hoping to glean some important information. That night, Gregory and Rudd, his servant, fly to Calais, France. They stealthily watch five ruffians in the "Cafe de la Cloche" mentioned in the mysterious telegram, until the men are summoned outside to a limousine containing Fortescue and Sabine. After an exchange of papers the car drives away and Rudd and Gregory trail the five men to a secret landing field on the coast. Here, aided by flares, a fleet of a dozen planes lands and unloads smuggled goods. Catching a ride back to Calais, Gregory is able to get his own plane in the air in time to follow the smuggler fleet on its way back to England.

CHAPTER XII

He climbed still higher as they passed beneath him, and altered his course a little when he noted that the fleet was now veering to the right.

Soon he picked up the lights of the English coast lying thousands of feet below to his left and, by the varying flashes of the Kent light-houses, he was able to check his course as almost dead northward, with Dover and the south Foreland light on his beam.

The smuggler fleet was a good way ahead below him now and still climbing, but he hoped that if he could maintain his present distance they would lead him in to their English landing ground without suspecting that they were being followed. Unfortunately the visibility ahead was by no means so good as it had been over the French coast and a moment later they passed through a cold wisp of cloud.

Gregory grabbed the throttle lever in his left hand and pushed it through the gate of the quadrant, bringing his supercharger into play and decreasing his distance a little, as he feared to lose the squadron, but they flew on, still gaining height, and apparently taking advantage of the cloud patches, rather than avoiding them. A few moments more and he could see only two machines on the extreme right wing of the flight.

It is not known how the Japanese emperor would hold up, as a poet, under fire.

Weekly Letter to Home-Makers

A Letter Written by Miss Edna M. Ferguson to Home-Makers will appear in each Tuesday's issue of The Bristol Courier. Through this medium Miss Ferguson will give many helpful hints to home-makers.

Dear Friends:

It wasn't so long ago that honey was reserved exclusively for one special treat—hot biscuits and honey.

Observance of the second National Honey Week last month (April 19-24), again focused attention on the surprising number of foods and beverages that take on new taste with the proper use of honey.

Listing more than 100 different "helpings" with honey, government experts declare that honey can be used in every course of dinner, from the tomato juice cocktail to the dessert.

Of course, honey does not blend with some foods—and it is important to use it sparingly in some recipes, so that it will contribute delicate flavor, rather than sweetness.

Actually it "does something" for many dishes, so that it is becoming increasingly popular in beverages, cakes, cookies, rolls, candy, fruits and salsas, in pies and puddings. Honey now is cooked with some meats, too, and is blossoming out in salads and salad dressings. There is a very practical reason for the use of honey in baked goods, since it has the power to keep them moist. Fruit and nut breads made with honey may be made a week in advance.

Exploring new uses for honey, the government finds that this sweet may be substituted for sugar in preparing cinnamon toast, candied vegetables, salad dressings, baked ham, baked apples, custards, puddings and pies.

The homemaker, for her part, will consider the decorative ability of honey—adding just a few drops of that golden-colored liquid on whipped cream, as an unusual garnish, its seasoning qualities and that power to keep baked goods moist and full of flavor over a period of time.

In addition to those three favorable arguments, the excellent food value of honey shows a number of nutritional advantages. Its minerals help reinforce the alkaline reserve of the body; its natural sugars supply quick energy and it does not tax digestions, since young and old systems handle honey with ease.

Even the dieter is steered honeyward, since its full flavor makes it more satiating and that is valuable, where the diner wishes to reduce his sugar intake.

Fortunately for the consumer, it hasn't occurred to the bees to hold out for the five-day, forty-hour week.

Very soon bees will be working overtime; in fact, they probably are working overtime already in many sections, carrying pollen from one blossom to another to improve the crop of cherries, pears, plums, apples and other fruits. It is estimated that there are 100,000 kinds of plants in the world which could not exist if the bees were not in the pollination business.

The colorful pottery now popular on breakfast and luncheon tables makes an appropriate container for the different forms of honey. Persons without a strong "sweet tooth" often like to melt and then dilute honey when it is not bought in liquid form. Children like it with cooked cereal, a surprise, and of course it is delicious with waffles. Try it with French toast.

Try broiled grapefruit with honey. Drizzle one tablespoon of honey, or two or three, over each serving. Broil 15 minutes, placing grapefruit half an inch ten inches below flame. Serve hot as a luncheon or dinner entree.

A jelly with a pronounced honey flavor is made in the proportion of one cup honey, one-fourth cup water and one-eighth cup liquid fruit pectin. The honey and water are heated to boiling (stirring constantly), the liquid fruit pectin is added and all heated just to the boiling point.

Although many states are producing a new product seen in a few shops honey, a tangy white paste honey was just released. It is made by bees of Trappist monks in Canada and has a low concentrated honey taste.

Another novel honey is made by bees that collect nectar from orange blossoms in Southern California. Florida has been the source of most orange blossom honey. The California variety is very sweet, light in color and clear. It is put up in convenient glass jugs with metal tops that act as a spout, closing tightly when not in use.

Encourage the busy bees by using honey in new ways. You'll like it.

The Great Game of Politics

newspapers and without denial or defense. The newspaper disclosure of Mr. Justice Hugo Black's carefully concealed membership in the Ku Klux Klan is a fine example. However, this is the first time, so far as can be recalled, that a national administration has undertaken a general campaign along these lines. There is no surer sign of weakness than concentrated bleating about the unfairness of the press—or more certain indication of disintegration and defeat.

what other President would have had so little personal censure as Mr. Roosevelt for autographing copies of the Democratic campaign book, later used by politicians to hold up corporations and business men at absurdly high prices for the benefit of the party treasury? From what other President would the strained explanation that he did not know what was going to be done with the books have been accepted?

OTHER instances could be cited in which newspaper criticism has been milder than the facts seemed to justify, particularly in view of the unprecedented parade by this Administration of its virtue and the high moral note so uniformly struck by its spokesmen. The truth is that no President in our time has had more kindly treatment personally from the press, yet none has been as bitter, vindictive and complaining. There is hardly a virile independent newspaper in any State which has not regularly borne attack from local politicians it has found necessary to oppose. In all cases these attacks have been among the most valuable assets of a good newspaper. They have thrived upon them, gained in public esteem. That the attacks have now become national instead of local will not diminish their value as assets—quite the contrary. The smarter politicians do not have to be told this—they know it.

MASS HOUSEKEEPING REQUIRES PLANNING

One way for the homemaker to offset that "three meal a day" weariness is to read about marketing and serving in terms of thousands and millions. After that, dinner for five doesn't seem quite so staggering a problem.

Statisticians have been computing the ham and eggs and roast beef or ders destined to be placed at the 1939 New York World's Fair for months past. The restaurants there will have a seating capacity for 43,200 and fair executives already are "talking turkey" with caterers and managers of cafeterias and dine and dance places.

It is calculated that the average visitor among the 50,000,000 anticipated guests will remain inside the exposition barriers for seven and one-half hours, during which time he will consume at least one square meal, not to mention hot dogs, mounds of popcorn and a few snacks of ice cream and pop.

Connoisseurs of food will be interested to learn that all of the 64 nations that are planning to represent have expressed the intention of having restaurants in which the cuisine of each country will be featured.

There will be everything from five o'clock tea in the $2,000,000 exhibit of the British Empire to the native Inca viands of Peru chefs, roast peanut and boiled chicken, rich with palm butter and topped with grated coconut in the Liberia pavilion; Netherlands spiced rices and fish and Norwegian snacks.

Returning to staggering figures, American Legion visitors in New York last year consumed 111 tons of butter; 2,000,000 quarts of milk; 5,000,000 cups of coffee; 333,000 dozen oranges; 5,000,000 eggs; 4,000,000 pounds of bread-stuffs—and a few other trifles.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOLBRISTOL

High velocity action, exciting hand-to-hand encounters between six-footers bent on crushing each other to a pulp, gun battles and sudden death, ruthless giants of crime versus the grim forces of law and order, typify in a small measure the high-tension atmosphere of Peter B. Kyne's "Valley of Wanted Men." Maurice Conn's screen thrill parade which will be the featured attraction at the Bristol Theatre today.

"Riders of the Dawn," a thrilling story of the early West, will open today at the Bristol Theatre with Jack Randall, sensational new singing star, in the leading role of this Monogram picture.

Jack Randall, a product of California, was born and raised on a ranch in San Fernando, a distance of 20 miles from Hollywood. His brother is Robert Livingston, who is also making a name for himself in pictures.

That wild-eyed clown of clowns, Jimmy Durante, caroms madly through Columbia's new musical comedy, "Start Cheering," which opened yesterday at the Grand Theatre, and thus proves that this world isn't such a bad place after all. It can't be, with "Schnozzle" around. And when such excellent actors as Walter Connolly, Joan Perry, Charles Starrett, Gertrude Niesen, Raymond Walburn, The Three Stooges and Broderick Crawford are discovered in the same picture and in a merry mood, the result can be nothing worse than wonderful. "Start Cheering" scores in every quarter to win the musical championship.

To those bright names already mentioned as being outstanding in the picture, add Prof. Quiz, Hal LeRoy, Ernest Truex, Virginia Dale, Chas. Chase, Jimmy Wallington, Louis Prima and his band, and Johnny Green and his orchestra. A great many stars and a great deal of entertainment.

KENDIG MOVES INTO BOWLERS' "SELECT CLASS"

Hitting the maples consistently in the 200 class for three games, Harry Kendig, of Bristol, moved into the "select class" of the first ten bowlers in the State Tournament being held at Easton from April 18 to June 2. He is tentatively one of the state's ten leading bowlers unless his total score is equaled or exceeded in the next three weeks of the tournament. His scores were 219, 203 and 213 for a grand total of 635, which gave him the spot among the select bowlers of the State at the present time.

The Bristol aggregation which journeyed upstate to participate in the State-wide tournament, which is the first of its kind ever held in Pennsylvania, rolled in the five-man team, doubles, and singles events. It was in the singles event that Kendig went "hot" to place among the ten top bowlers to date in the tournament. The Bristol six who made the trip were Joe Barton, Harry Kendig, Bill Bailey, "Jimmy" Christopher, "Bill" Bell, and Felix Tomlinson.

Next to Kendig's high mark in the singles, came "Bill" Bailey with 521 and then Joe Barton with 504, while the rest all fell below the 500 mark in this event. Kendig was the only Bristol bowler to hit over 200 in any one game. In the doubles, the team of Bell and Barton hit for a high 1643 with Bell rolling 566 and Barton 477. Bell rolled for 220 in the second game in this event. Chris hit for 594 and Felix 498 to give them a total of two pins better than the thousand mark, while Kendig and Bailey slipped in this event to hit for a total of 964.

The five-man team, composed of Kendig, Bailey, Chris, Barton and Felix, rolled for a combined total of 2504 pins to easily whip their opponents, the Newtown Coal Co. of Media, Pa., who hit for a total of 2379. As a matter of fact, the Bristol outfit outrolled the Jim Murie team of the Philadelphia Maegher Leagues by 32 pins. The Maegher's finished runner-up to the Bristol five, who had the high five-man score among the eight teams that rolled at the same time, four o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

To add more laurels to themselves, the Bristol quintet finished up among the first 25 of the total of 135 aggregations that have hit the maples in the State Tournament to date, which is quite a distinction. Joe Barton was high man for the Bristol five, hitting for a total of 533 in the three games and a high 212 in the first game. Bill Bailey's 193 in the final tilt was the next closest to a 200 game. Generally the other scores were evenly balanced through the three games. Bailey was second high individual with 517, while Kendig finished two pins behind him with 515, and both Chris and Felix hit below the 500 mark. Bristol's game totals in each of the were also very consistent, hitting 843, 389 and 822 respectively, a difference of only 21 pins between the highest and lowest scores.

An interesting comparison is made between Bristol's team represented in the State Tournament and the Bristol team entered in the National Tournament, which is the A. B. C. S. held in Chicago this year. In the five-man event, neither of the two Bristol teams playing in Chicago could equal the score the team representing Bristol in the State event piled up. The Burlington-Bristol outfit hit for 2477 while the Green Palace five rolled 2388 in Chicago as compared to the Eastern score of 2504 made by Bristol.

At the same time, three doubles teams in Chicago outscored Bristol's high total in this event at Easton. The team of Art Brooks and Schroeder hit for 1947, while Joe Amisson and Shumard combined for a 1976 total, and Francis O'Boyle and Shell garnered a total of 1662 pins. The Bell-Barton team at Easton hit for 1943 for Bristol's high total there.

But in the singles, Kendig's fine mark topped by 15 pins Joe Amisson's performance for Bristol's high single in Chicago. Amisson hit for 611 while Kendig totaled 626. Each had half of their total entrants in the singles hit over the 500 mark, three out of six for Bristol at Easton; and five out of 16 for Bristol at Chicago. However, in the final analysis, the Bristol group entered in the State Tournament figured to have outscored those teams representing Bristol in the A. B. C. S. at Chicago by a slight margin.

HITS MARRIAGE THEORY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—(INS)—That old argument in favor of matrimony—two can live as cheaply as one—has been exploded by a Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor. One and six-tenths the amount required for a single person to live is needed by a married couple, according to Professor F. Alexander Maroun. Another point Professor Maroun brought out in his lecture to Tech students on marriage was that no person earning less than $1,200 a year in these troubled times should enter the holy state.

Indians on Warpath

By BURNLEY

Oscar Vitt — THE NEW INJUN
CHIEF HAS THE TRIBE HUSTLING!

5-17

Oscar Vitt is treading on dangerous ground in attempting to fill the post of Cleveland manager. Many Injun chiefs bit the dust before Oscar came on the scene, so the setup at the Forest City wasn't exactly reassuring.

Oscar is not a guy to be daunted by the failures of his predecessors, however. He appears to be doing very well in his new job, as far as one can judge at such an early stage in the campaign.

Vitt has the Indians hustling, and that's more than can be said of most of the former Cleveland managers.

One of the pleasant surprises of the Indians' early season spurt was the fine hitting of Hal Trosky, hitherto an in-and-outter. Hal broke into the majors with a bang in 1934, when he was one of the best first year men in the junior loop. Since then he has failed to reach the heights predicted for him.

The Cleveland clouter blames his erratic stickwork in past years on the home run craze. He was always swinging from his shoe tops, trying to knock the pill over the nearest stopstop, and as a result his batting average suffered.

Today Hal is concentrating on getting hits, and is letting the home run angle slide into the background. His shortened swing produced amazing results in the early weeks of the current flag scramble, so this may be his banner year.

DOUGHERTY BROTHERS AID ST. ANN'S TO WIN

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE

—Schedule for tonight—

SUPERIOR ZINC—GRUNDY'S (Grundy's field)

Umpire, Delia's scorer, Tomlinson

ST. ANN'S—ROHM & HAAS (Roehm & Haas field)

Umpire, Praul, scorer, Juno

The Dougherty brothers, George, Bill and John, aided immensely in giving the St. Ann's A. nine its third consecutive win in the Bristol Twilight League last evening on the Grundy diamond as the "Saints" whitewashed the Grundy team, 2-0.

Bill and John came through with two wonderful catches to rob Grundy batters of hits. In the first, Earl Jeffries sent a short fly to left which seemed certain to drop for hit but "Bill" Dougherty by fast sprinting managed to catch up with the ball and before it dropped stuck out his gloved hand to make the catch. The hit would have proved disastrous for later in the frame. Muffett and DiTanna hit safely.

In the following session, with Capriotti and Kervick on base, Narcisi sent a long hit to deep left-center. John Dougherty gave chase and not having time to put up his glove mitt jumped and caught the ball bare-handed, robbing the batter of a possible triple.

George Dougherty, besides handing four chances flawlessly, socked a triple and received two passes, one of which accounted for a run in the fifth.

St. Ann's used three pitchers in the contest. "Pete" Fiske started but when it seemed it wasn't his night he was removed for Whyno. Whyno pitched until the final batter in the fifth when he was injured and replaced by DeRisi. DeRisi fanned the first four batters to face him and during his tenure fanned five and allowed one hit.

Ralph Narcisi did a good job on the hill for the losers and kept the six hits he allowed scattered. He gave up a run in the third on a pass, a fielder's choice, two errors, and a hit by Angelo. The other run was the result of a walk to Dougherty, Hughes' sacrifice, and a clean hit to center by Choma.

Failure to hit in the pinches accounted mostly for the Grundy defeat.

In the first three innings a total of seven players were stranded.

On the other side of the ledger, the Dougherty's scored a run in the fourth.
